Rules for the Final Round of Colours From The Grey

1. This game has an array of hexagons, which has a start hexagon and an end hexagon. Every team has to begin at the first hexagon and reach the end hexagon, eventually.
2. The objective of this game is to solve the puzzle/question contained in each hexagon, as and when your team arrives at a hexagon.
3. Each hexagon would have a specified number of points allocated to it, the details of which can be seen from the diagram above.
4. A team can only unlock a hexagon that it has just reached by correctly answering the question associated with it.
5. Each time you correctly answer a hexagon's question and unlock it, you can step into any of its adjacent hexagons to now answer the question associated with it. The team has the option of going back to any of their previously unlocked hexagons, and taking an alternative path, if they desire so.
6. If a team fails to answer the question on a given hexagon, that hexagon will be locked permanently to them, such that it may not be attempted again, and the team would have to take an alternative path around that hexagon. There are no negative points for incorrectly answering a question.
7. If there is no path for the team to take to the final hexagon, i.e. either you are stuck at one of the edges or all the hexagons around you have been permanently disabled, then in that case, the team will get eliminated.
8. Every team has to score a maximum number of points, and also reach the end hexagon, within the specified time limit.
9. If a team reaches the end hexagon before the specified time limit, they may attempt to solve more questions associated with the hexagons adjacent to the unlocked hexagons in order to gain more points.
10. If two or more teams earn the same number of points at the end of the specified time limit, then the team which had reached the end hexagon earliest, would win the tie.
11. Any further rules or queries would be clarified on the day of finals itself.
